If you can walk, you can square dance!

Square dancing is set to modern music.

The caller weaves directions for the dancers into familiar music with a steady beat.

The easy-to-follow calls are taught clearly so you quickly learn the calls and begin to enjoy dancing right away.

According to a Mayo Clinic study, dancing can burn as many calories as walking, swimming or riding a bicycle. Square dancing is a low-impact activity requiring constant movement and quick directional changes, which help keep the body and mind in shape.

Heart rate increases and muscles strengthen. Balance improves and mind-body coordination sharpens. It provides people of all ages an opportunity to have fun, forget their troubles, make new friends, get exercise and feel good about mastering something new and worthwhile.
